SECRETARY FALL AT ODDS WITH SECY WALLACE

Interior Secretary Said to Have Appealed to Presi-

FOREST RESERVE

Agricultural Department Head Makes
Issue of Proposed Transfer of Forest Duties.

Washington, March 6.—Open warfare is cracking in President Harding's Cabinet between Secretary of Interior Fall and Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture. So intense is the battle that President Harding has been drawn into it, with an appeal from Mr. Fall for protection from what he regards as vicious propaganda of the Department of Agriculture.

Further, reports grow daily more insistent that Mr. Fall may leave the Cabinet shortly unless he emerges undisputed victor in the Cabinet war.

The setting of the battle comprises 120,000,000 acres of forest lands in the United States and Alaska. Mr. Fall desires to transfer these wood acres to his own department. He is bitterly opposed by the Department of Agriculture, which has regained over them since President Roosevelt wrested them from the Department of the Interior.

The American Forestry Association has issued numerous statements attacking Mr. Fall for the attempted transfer. This association sees in the transfer the destruction of all efforts to conserve the forests and the beginning of exploitation of lands here and in Alaska by private interests.

Secretary Fall has written a letter to a representative whose name has not been disclosed, in which he complains of the attacks made against him, and announced he has authorized his assistants in the Department of the Interior to place the controversy before President Harding.

He says in the letter that the proposed bill giving his department control of the administration of forests in Alaska by transfer of the forests to the Interior, the administration of mining laws, the agricultural entry laws, etc.

As a result of this attitude, he says, he was assailed in various statements issued for the newspapers by the American Forestry Association. Editorial comment in various newspapers throughout the country was made that the Department of the Interior was a real estate body and should have no control of the forestry problem.

Mr. Fall singles out Gifford Pinchot as one of the sponsors of the attack. Mr. Pinchot long has been identified with the conservation movement. He states that Mr. Pinchot accused him of desiring to turn over the natural resources of the country to private exploitation.

President Harding has made no decision in the controversy as yet.

Secretary Wallace refused to comment upon Secretary Fall's attack, although he said he may make a statement later.

SONATA RECITAL

Successful Affair Given by Music Class of Academy

A sonata recital was given at St. Mary's Academy, conducted by the Sister of the Holy Cross, February 23, under the direction of Professor Herman V. Rakemann, violinist, of Washington. The affair proved one of the most successful musicals given recently by that institution, and special praise is given Professor Rakemann for his work, and also the participants.

The program given follows: "Sonata F. Minor" (Mendelssohn), Allegro moderato, Adagio, Allegro agitato, Miss Margaret Shuman; "Sonata A Major" (Geminiani), Andante, Allegro, Miss Dorothy Vogel; "Sonata D Minor" (Bach), Allegro, Miss Dorothy Vogel; "Sonata D Major" (Brahms), Allegro, Miss Dorothy Vogel; "Sonata D Major" (Brahms), Allegro, Miss Dorothy Vogel; "Sonata D Major" (Brahms), Allegro, Miss Dorothy Vogel.

Participating pupils received much praise for their splendid recital, as did also Professor Rakemann for his work. Professor Rakemann is an expert violinist and is well known among the music lovers of Washington.

ROAD CLOSED

The Duke St. Road on Little River Turnpike will be closed after 7 a. m. Wednesday to all traffic so that the R. F. and P. might renew the bridge over their tracks.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

Washington, March 6.—President Harding is unalterably opposed to a reduction in the size of the army and navy to a point which might endanger the safety of the United States. He will fight all Congressional attempts to effect Treasury economies by radical cuts in the organized military forces.

President Harding has made this plain to those in charge of military and naval matters in Congress. While he explains international affairs are in satisfactory shape, the United States cannot afford to be crippled in a military way. The government, must, he feels, be ready to defend itself at all times. He would not wish to see the army reduced to less than 130,000 men and even not to this extent until the national guard reorganization had progressed to an extent where it would be available for emergency. So far as the navy is concerned, he believes the reduction should not be below 80,000 men. The army authorization at this time is for 150,000 men and the navy around 100,000.

President Harding's merchant marine policy is founded on an earnest desire for world trade which will bring cheap transportation and prosperity to the United States. The two, in the opinion of the chief executive, must go hand in hand.

The President has a vision of American shipping sailing from every American port because this would mean increased transportation, cheaper rates and prosperity. To accomplish this, the Executive believes that the proposal for ownership of shipping by American railroads should be seriously considered. The Executive is not prepared to discuss the effects of a course upon water competition coastwise or on the Great Lakes. He has not studied this phase of the problem. But it became known that he looks back to the German trade conquest of pre-war days with a conviction that it was brought largely through the close liaison or mutual operation of German railroads and steamer lines to foreign ports.

Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy of the District Supreme Court has issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Philip Reinhardt, former Shipping Board auditor stationed at the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation plant at Newport News.

Reinhardt was indicted with Chas. W. Morse and others on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States government. Failing to appear and give bond the warrant was issued for his apprehension. The man is supposed to be either in Baltimore or New York. The other men named defendants in the indictment have all furnished surety for their appearance. Reinhardt, for his failure to appear faces a jail sentence. Deputies of the court are now looking for him to bring him before the bar of justice for trial.

Information received by the Gazette correspondent today indicates that the dinner given by Jos. P. Tumulty, secretary to former President Wilson, was not all harmonious. It appears that while Mr. Tumulty himself advocated the campaign on the issue of the League of Nations, Representative Rouse of Kentucky, chairman of the democratic congressional campaign committee composed the idea with vigorous terms. Rouse argued that the League of Nations had been blighted by the votes of more than 7,000,000 men and women in the United States in the last election.

So far as he was concerned, he said, the congressional committee would pay no attention to the issue suggested by Mr. Tumulty but would confine its efforts to the reduction of the alleged promises of the republicans to reduce taxation and relieve the average American of his burdens now assessed against him by the government.

The record of the present republican administration in congress, said Mr. Rouse, would be the main issue in the forthcoming congressional campaign.

Governor Cox who participated in the discussion is said to have advocated a return to the back of the republicans against the League of Nations. There were many speeches made pro and con during the dinner but there shall be no mention made of the League of Nations in the forthcoming congressional contest so far as the democrats are concerned.

LIQUOR CASES FOR GRAND JURY

Five Persons Charged With Violations in Court
Today

Three Taken in One Raid—Two Separate Cases Also Heard

Most of the time of the police court today was taken up in hearing five cases for alleged infractions of the state prohibition law and it resulted in all five cases being referred to the grand jury by Police Justice F. G. Duvall. The first case was that of a man giving the name of Richard Hayden, of Washington. He was charged with being drunk Saturday and of having two quarts of what the police said looked like liquor in his possession. Hayden said he came to Alexandria Saturday afternoon to see about some work and was given three drinks, but had no recollection of how he came into possession of the alleged whisky. He was taken in custody by Policemen Lawrence Padgett and Morris. Hayden was held for the grand jury. Hayden was represented by Attorney Carl Budwesky.

In a raid made Saturday afternoon in the rear of the old city hotel at the corner of Cameron and Royal streets, conducted by Chief Goods, Sergeant Wilkinson, Policemen Lawrence Padgett and Morris, it was testified by the police that they recovered twenty-three half pints of liquor and they also arrested three men giving the names of Joseph Burke, Mercier Langley and Richard Swain. All denied ownership of the liquor when the case was called, although a colored man giving the name of Roy Fletcher testified that about three months ago he purchased a half pint of liquor from Swain. Swain said he had no recollection of such a transaction. Swain was represented by Attorney Frank Stuart. All three were held for the grand jury.

Paul Pommet also was charged with violating the provisions of the law. The police testified he had a still, some beer and a quantity of mash. Chief Goods, Sgt. Wilkinson, Policemen Magner, Morris and Lawrence Padgett, presented the case. Attorney H. Noel Garner represented Mr. Pommet. He was held for the grand jury.

BAGGETT CASE BEING HEARD IN POLICE COURT

ponement Which is Refused by Court

T. J. WRIGHT APPEARS

Wright Says That He Has Taken
Matter Up With Attorney General of Virginia.

When the case of Mrs. Mary L. Baggett, charged with the murder of her husband, was brought before the police court today, Attorney Frank Stuart asked for a postponement of the trial until after the case of the State of Virginia against T. J. Wright, charged with the murder of a woman, had been heard. The court refused the request.

Wright stated that he had written the attorney general, in addition to telephoning, and that the attorney general had stated he was writing a letter to be shown the court. However, Wright could produce neither his letter to the attorney general or the latter's reply, and Justice Duvall stated that in the absence of anything but Wright's unsupported statement, he would be compelled to require that the case be heard.

Attorney Stuart then submitted the affidavit made by Mrs. Baggett in the case, and at noon Wright was on the stand, being examined by Attorney Edmund Burke, representing Mrs. Baggett.

SOLDIER BONDS BILL TO HOUSE THIS WEEK

Full Committee Will Take Up
This Measure Tomorrow

4 PLANS OUTLINED

Adjusted Service Certificate Plan Meets Approval of Those Favoring Army Bonus.

Washington, March 6.—With opposition in most quarters largely dissipated by the new soldier bonus plan, the legislation to adjust the compensation of the men who fought for the United States in the great war is scheduled to reach the calendar of the House of Representatives this week.

Formal action on the bill framed by Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee will be taken by the full committee with the Democrats participating for the first time tomorrow. The intention is to report the bill to the House at once, but to delay passing it for passage probably for another week.

Comparatively little criticism has developed against the new adjusted service certificate plan among members of Congress who are favorable to bonus legislation. Such attacks as have thus far been launched against the new plan are from those who are opposed to any bonus legislation what ever.

The opposition to a sales tax emanated chiefly from members of Congress favorable to bonus legislation. This opposition was sufficient to cause the Ways and Means Committee to abandon all attempts to report a bill imposing new taxes. The Republicans favorable to some kind of bonus legislation, who fought the proposed tax, are inclined to the belief that the present scheme offers the most feasible solution of the troublesome problem.

Attacks, which will be made on the bill, will be based chiefly on the fact that the estimated financial burden on the government has been increased by $1,000,000,000 under the new scheme. Members of the Ways and Means Committee will be accused of shifting the burden of a future generation while getting credit from their constituents for a soldier's bonus which does not levy any additional taxes on the public.

In reply to this criticism members of the Ways and Means Committee declare that Congress owes an obligation to the former service men which must be discharged; at once, and the Treasury will be much better able to bear the financial burden at a future date than at present.

While admitting the present plan may mean an ultimate increase in the cost to the government, they point out that this is not a certainty, and that recent expressions of opinion by officials of the American Legion have indicated that an overwhelming majority of the former service men would have elected to take the certificate form of compensation in preference to a cash bonus under any circumstances.

Under the bill as approved unanimously by Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, a veteran who is entitled to receive less than $50 in adjusted service may receive cash. Veterans in this class include those of the rank of captain and lower grades, who served in the army, navy, or Marine Corps, more than 90 days and not more than 110 days. The basic adjusted service pay is $1 per day of home service and $1.25 per day of overseas service in excess of 60 days.

Veterans entitled to more than $50 may choose between four forms of compensation, as follows:
1. An adjusted service certificate on which a loan up to 50 per cent of the face value may be obtained from a national or State bank immediately.
2. Vocational training aid.
3. Farm or home aid.
4. Land settlement aid.

Plan to Award Prizes to Members for Fish Catches—Seek Game
Warden

The Alexandria Rod and Gun Club at a recent meeting held in the office of W. S. Snow elected fourteen new members and adopted a constitution and by-laws. It was decided to defer the election of permanent officers till March 16. It also was decided to hold its meetings the third Thursday of each month.

A resolution was adopted calling upon the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game to the necessity of naming a game warden for this city and that an emergency existed as the non enforcement of such laws. The club is making active preparations for the fishing season and named a committee that will give prizes to the members catching the largest number of fish in one day and a prize to the member landing the biggest fish during the season.

Glee Club Concert Friday

Tickets are now on sale for the Glee Club concert to be held in the Westminster Building, Friday evening, March 10, and are being disposed rapidly, to the great satisfaction of the ladies in charge. All of the 65 members of this club will be on hand for the occasion, and under the excellent leadership of their director a splendid program is anticipated. Mr. Miller, the director, called up today to advise as that their volunteer, Miss Elsa L. Raner, is a pupil of Neohold Auer, who also taught Mischa Elman and Zimbalist, two of the world's greatest violinists. Auer's studio is in New York City, and Miss Raner goes to that place for each lesson.

It is hoped that Alexandrians will not miss the unusual opportunity to hearing this excellent talent, which is being given under the auspices of Mrs. S. H. Field's circle of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Second Presbyterian Church of this city.

UNEMPLOYMENT BOOM NOW ON CRISIS FADING

Employment Conference Is Beginning to Show Definite Results

SIGNS OF RECOVERY

Public Is Cautious Not to Relax Effort for Prosperity Growth Near-Repression Teaches Lesson

Washington, March 6.—The employment boom beginning in March which the President's unemployment conference predicted last October is definitely on the way, officials declare. But the time for the nation to rest upon its oars is still remote, because the signs of this recovery are rather tendencies than statistics, they contend.

That these facts must be borne in mind not only until the present employment crisis is passed, but forever, because future cycles of depression are bound to recur, was emphasized in exclusive interviews with Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the standing committee on emergency measures, and Edwin E. Hurd, secretary of the unemployment conference, and the newly formed committee on business cycles.

These two men have been carrying on the work of the conference since its adjournment last October—Woods concentrated on the present emergency and Hurd on preparatory steps to mitigate future crises.

"The past three weeks have brought visible evidence of recovery," said Woods. "Individual cities throughout the country have shown marked improvement. But this is no time to relax."

"The distress growing out of unemployment is not going to decrease in anywhere nearly the same proportion as unemployment decreases."

"Throughout the winter the emergency work has gone one step back of more relief work in two ways: 'First—It has tried to keep people from becoming public dependents. 'Second—It has treated the problem on a friendly, neighborly, industrial basis, leaving to each city the working out of its local problem with the assistance and co-operation of the government."

"Nor can it be charged that the unemployed have been too choosy. It is an intolerable situation whereby free-born men, through no fault of their own, are suddenly deprived of their means of livelihood. Specialization in

IN CONGRESS YESTERDAY

SENATE

Met at 11 a. m., and recessed at 6:30 p. m., until a. m., today. The proposed change in the rules consolidating all appropriating powers in an enlarged appropriations committee to conform to the new budget system was under discussion throughout the day without final action.

A vote of 46 to 20 on the adoption of a minor amendment indicated ultimate approval of the change in the rules. Three members of each committee now handling appropriations that are to be transferred under an amendment agreed to would sit as ex officio members and one would be assigned as conferee on bills pertaining to matters heretofore under their jurisdiction.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, made another political speech and quoted a speech by Senator Lodge in 1896 in which the Massachusetts senator was represented as favoring a division of appropriation authority in the Senate.

Senator Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, occupied the rest of the day in a speech on the Newberry case. The character of much of the discussion convinced Republican leaders that an organized Democratic filibuster to delay legislation of all kinds was under full swing.

By a vote of 41 to 19 the long-contested promotion of Major Robert G. Peck to be lieutenant colonel in the regular army was confirmed, with seven Republicans and twelve Democrats voting to reject. A large number of navy promotions and postmaster also were confirmed.

Gerhard A. Bading, former mayor of Milwaukee, was nominated to be minister to Ecuador; James C. McGregor, of Pennsylvania, to be United States marshal for the western district of Pennsylvania; also a long list of postmasters, including Thomas H. Probert, at Hazleton, Pa.

Under a resolution by Senator King the alien property custodian would be directed to give the Senate the names of all aliens employed in the conduct of alien property cases.

Party Faces Possible Loss of

TERMS EXPIRE

Progressives Are Becoming Active and
May Have to be Seriously Reckoned With.

Washington, March 6.—As the first year of President Harding's administration passes the two political parties are advancing toward the Senatorial and Congressional campaigns preceding the autumn elections, which will determine whether the party of Harding will continue in legislative control of the Government.

From the record of the Administration and Congress in the year since March 4, 1921, will be developed the issues of those campaigns. The Republican hosts, the aggressors in the Presidential campaign which sent Mr. Harding to the White House must take the field this spring, summer and fall upon the defensive.

Even if Mr. Harding does not face a prospect as threatening as that which overthrew the Democratic Congress in the midst of Woodrow Wilson's second term, he nevertheless is confronted with the probability of reduced majorities, particularly in the House of Representatives, sufficient to give the Democrats basis for a cry that the Administration has been repudiated. A certain disadvantage accrues to the Republican party from the topheavy majority it has enjoyed in both branches of Congress since the sweeping victory of 1920.

Districts commonly Democratic were swept into the Republican column then in the fervor of the popular reaction against the Wilson regime. It is exceedingly doubtful whether such enthusiasm can repeat itself after two years of responsibility and full control.

Parts of the country will return more nearly to "natural" political lines, and the Democrats have the advantage of whatever disillusionment may exist and whatever disappointments over the accomplishments of the party in power.

It is in full realization of the importance of holding their lines against reverse tantamount to a repudiation that the Republican party is preparing to echo across the country the cry, "Stand by the President! Support the Administration!"

The present Senate is composed of 60 Republicans and 36 Democrats, a Republican majority of 24. There will be elections in November to fill 34 Senatorial seats. Nineteen of the expiring terms are those of Republicans and 15 are Democrats. Democrats, to win the majority in the upper branch, would have to elect 28 of the 34 Senators to be chosen to gain a margin of one vote. The Republicans have to elect but 8 to hold a majority of one vote.

The Democratic Senators whose terms expire March 3, 1923, requiring elections for their seats this year, are: Ashurst, Arizona; Culbertson, Texas; Gerry, Rhode Island; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Jones, New Mexico; Kendrick, Wyoming; King, Utah; Macellister, Tennessee; Myers, Montana; Pittman, Nevada; Pomeroy, Ohio; Reed, Missouri; Swanson, Virginia; Trammell, Florida, and Williams, Mississippi.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY EDITION

The Gazette's National Publicity Edition for Alexandria, to appear, the latter part of this month, has met with an enthusiastic reception far beyond our most sanguine expectations. Our representatives have been cordially welcomed by the wholesale and retail merchants, the manufacturers, and the public in general. Every industrial interest will be represented in the pages of the Publicity Edition; with numerous articles on the city, touching on all its unique phases, historic, social, commercial, and geographic. Special photographs are being taken of the various points of interest, and of people prominently identified with our home life, which will be electrotyped and appear in the paper. The most eminent authorities on the various topics of local interest have generously consented to prepare special contributions for the edition, and its pages will contain much interesting data that has not appeared hitherto, and which will give to a peculiar value for future reference.

A copy of the paper, with its 48 or more pages, will be sent to every Chamber of Commerce in the United States. A directory of the farming population tributary to Alexandria is in course of preparation, and The Gazette will be sent to every name on the list. This will result in an advertisement such as Alexandria has never had before, in its history. The effects are bound to be felt for years to come, and we anticipate that the benefits will reach out into every branch of commercial and industrial activity in the city.

The Gazette's contention is that the advantages of Alexandria are but to be made known in order to attract new people and fresh capital. Both of these we need, and they will firmly establish a greater city whose wealth will then be augmented more surely and rapidly than ever.

We are glad to say that in our efforts to give Alexandria its needed publicity we have found a good ninety-nine per cent of our people loyal boosters. The occasion seems to be one on which all can unite without differing views or contentious disparagement. This is, indeed, gratifying and a most auspicious sign for the future. This spirit is all that is needed to insure success; and the spirit is here among us, active and optimistic.

Norfolk's Coming Election. How About Alexandria?

A mere suggestion: Norfolk City election is less than four months off, and upon its results depend the future of Greater Norfolk. Regardless of all personal dislikes, former political alliances or leanings, every voter owes it to himself to weigh well every point at issue before casting his ballot. The "most popular fellow"—even your best personal friend—may not be of the best possible councilmanic timber. Your future welfare, as well as that of Norfolk, demands the best. You have the choosing. Think well—cast aside sentiment and soreness—make your choice.

GENEROUS SUBSCRIPTION

Richmond, Va.—H. B. Fitzgerald, of Danville, has the distinction of having given one of the largest sums received from any one individual in the drive of the Near East Relief for $300,000 in Virginia, since the New Year, according to State Treasurer Waller Holliday, of Richmond. Mr. Holliday received $500 from Mr. Fitzgerald in one contribution today.

This gift, which for liberality has been equaled by one received from a Beane, man, was for the cause of humanity. It means a chance to teach eight little children to be self supporting and to insure them life until they can care for themselves.

"I wish that every Virginian could give a like sum for the cause of humanity," Honorary State Chairman E. Lee Trinkle said this morning when informed of the gift at the governor's mansion. "It would mean another chance for thousands who look to America alone to save them from starvation, and who can be saved only through such generosity as this shown by this generous Danville man."

"Danville has set the pace," was the only comment made by State Chairman Oliver J. Sands on the receipt of the contribution.

USEFUL MINERAL

Washington, D. C.—A remarkable variety of uses for one of the most widely distributed constituents of the earth's crust, silica, is named by the United States Bureau of Mines as the result of a study of the possibilities of this material. Silica in its various forms, in quartzite, sandstone, granite, tripoli, and so on, is found in many forms, the most important of which are: quartz, quartzite, sandstone, granite, tripoli, and so on. It is found in many forms, the most important of which are: quartz, quartzite, sandstone, granite, tripoli, and so on.

Silica is found in many forms, the most important of which are: quartz, quartzite, sandstone, granite, tripoli, and so on. It is found in many forms, the most important of which are: quartz, quartzite, sandstone, granite, tripoli, and so on.

Free silica in its varied forms is widely distributed, but deposits of commercial value are few and far between. However, with the exception of such relatively scarce materials as tripoli and flint grinding pebbles, most forms of silica are sold for such low prices that economic factors, such as proximity to railroads and to local markets, govern the value of deposits. Thus deposits of glass sand may be valuable if located far from supplies of cheap fuel and far from large centers of consumption for glass.

Methods of mining the various siliceous materials vary widely, depending on the form of the material, nature and location of deposits, and type of product to be made. The Bureau of Mines found. Most of the deposits are worked by open-pit or quarrying methods, often in a very crude way. Sand deposits may be worked by hydraulicking, by dredging or by the use of a steam shovel. Vein quartz is often obtained as a by-product in the mining of other materials. Pegmatite quartz is almost always obtained as a by-product in working pegmatite dikes for feldspar or mica.

Various forms of silica, in a finely ground state, enter into the composition of scouring and polishing soaps and powders, tooth-powders and paste. Quartz, quartzite, sandstone and sand, coarsely ground and closely sized, are used in the manufacture of sandpaper. The same material, crushed into sharp grains, uniform in size, are used in sand-blast work. For sawing and polishing marble and granite, sharp, clean sand graded into various sizes is used. Massive sandstone, very fine to moderately coarse grained, is used for whetstones, grindstones, pulping stones and oil stones. Chert, flint and quartzite in dense, solid blocks, are used for tube-mill lining. Rounded flint pebbles are extensively employed in tube mill grinding.

In making silica firebrick and other refractories, fairly pure quartz, known as gannister, is used. In making silicon, ferro-silicon and silicon alloys of other metals, such as copper, moderately pure sand and massive crystalline quartz are employed. Massive quartz and quartzite are used as a flux in smelting basic ores. Fine sand and ground tripoli enter into the composition of foundry parting sand.

In the various important chemical industries, massive quartz or quartzite are used as linings for acid towers. Various forms of silica are used as filtering mediums, and pure quartz sand is used in the manufacture of sodium silicate and carborundum. Paint manufacturers employ finely ground silica of various varieties as an inert extender. Finely ground silica of all types is used as a wood filler and as a filler in rubber, pressed and molded goods and in phonograph records.

In the pottery industry, flint, chert, and other forms of silica, finely ground, are used as ingredients of bodies and glazes. Pure quartz sand is employed in the manufacture of ordinary glass. Very pure massive quartz is employed in the manufacture of chemical apparatus, such as tubes, crucibles and dishes.

The manufacture of decorative materials such as crystal balls, table tops, vases and statues requires the use of less common types of silica, such as rock crystal, amethyst, rose quartz, citrine quartz, smoky quartz, chrysoprase, agate, chalcedony, opal, onyx, sardonyx and jasper.

Massive and ground diatomaceous earth is employed in the making of heat insulation for pipes, boilers and kilns, and sound insulation in walls and between floors. Moderately pure diatomaceous sand is one of the principal constituents of sand-lime brick. For the manufacture of lenses and accessories for optical apparatus, clear, colorless, flawless rock crystal or massive crystalline quartz is employed.

COMPARISON OF RETAIL AND FARM PRICES IN VIRGINIA FOR 1913, 1920 AND 1921

The consumer has not received the benefit of the tremendous decline in the prices of farm products according to the statistics compiled by H. M. Taylor of U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates, from the reports of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics for retail prices, and of the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates for farm prices.

The average retail price of foods in Norfolk, Richmond and Washington, have been compared with the average farm price in Virginia, and this comparison shows some startling facts in regard to the spread between retail and farm prices. Therefore, the consumer is vitally interested in devising some plan whereby the cost of

The average retail price of sirloin steak in Norfolk, Richmond, and Washington on December 15, 1921, which are the latest figures available was 37-4 cents per pound, which is a decrease of 13 per cent from December 15, 1920, but 54 per cent greater than in 1913. On the other hand the average farm price of beef cattle on December 15, 1921 was 5.3 cents per pound, representing a decline of 27 per cent during the past year, and 10 per cent less than in 1913. That is, the consumer is paying 84 per cent more for his steak than he did in 1913, while the farmer is actually getting 10 per cent less for his cattle than he did in 1913. In other words the retail price of sirloin steak in 1913 was slightly more than 4 times the farm price, and in 1921 slightly over 7 times. Thus it is seen that the spread between the consumer and the producer is becoming greater and greater.

Other foods also show this ever widening gap between the retail and farm price. For instance, the retail price of pork chops in 1913 was 2 1/2 times the farm price; in 1920 nearly 3 1/2, and in 1921 nearly 4 times; the retail price of bread in 1913 was 3-1-3

HOME-MADE CHURCH

The Bronx, New York's famous residential section has a home made church. It began life as a saloon in the period antedating the Year 1, A. V. (ante Volstead). Then followed a spell as a billiard parlor. Rev. A. V. Vos, an Episcopal clergyman, next appeared upon the scene. He rented the saloon, organized a congregation, and with a big shoe case for an altar, and a dozen rude benches for the accommodation of his flock, which included Germans, Italians, Hungarians, Irish and Americans, the initial services were held. In course of time the little congregation increased to about fifty, hought the place, paid off the debt in sums of fifteen and twenty dollars at a time, and at length laid aside a reserve fund. And this is what they did with it.

Including in their number carpenters, bricklayers, cement workers, electricians, etc., they had a church meeting, parcelled out the work among themselves, and on the night of Dec. 3 last, they began tearing down the front of the building. Each night thereafter, as soon as supper was disposed of, the volunteers got back on the job, and by working every night save Sunday—sometimes well into the morning—they have succeeded in making over the place into a pretty little concrete edifice of the old Spanish Mission Type. It includes not only the chapel proper, but a dining hall, social hall, kitchen, etc. Rev. Vos says: "It isn't a cathedral, but to us it is the finest church building in the world, because we have reared it with our own hands." Plans are being formed for the consecration of the building by Bishop Manning at an early date.

INCOME TAX RETURNS

In filling their income tax returns for the year 1921, taxpayers must remember that taxable income is not necessarily cash. Where services are paid for with something other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken in payment is the amount to be included in income. For example, the value of merchandise received by a clerk of a grocery store as part payment for his services must be reported as income. Compensation paid an employee of a corporation in shares of stock is to be treated as if the corporation sold the stock at its market value and paid the employee in cash. Promissory notes received in payment for services and not merely as security for such payment constitute income to the amount of their fair market value. Living quarters and meals furnished as compensation for services are to be reported as income. A hotel clerk given a room and his meals as part payment for his services is required to report as income the amount he would have to pay for board and lodging elsewhere.

The value of quarters, light and heat furnished army officers whether stationed at an army post or paid from funds allowed for such purposes when officers are stationed elsewhere is taxable income in an amount equal to the cost to the government of furnishing such quarters, etc. Where an officer or enlisted man is allowed commutation in lieu of quarters, light and heat, the entire amount received for such purposes for the taxable year must be included in gross income.

Where living quarters, food clothing, etc., are provided for an employee solely for the convenience of an employer, the value thereof need not be included in the income of an employee. For example, where because of the location and nature of the work it is necessary that employees engaged in fishing and canning be furnished board and lodging by the employer, the value of such board and lodging may be considered as contributed for the convenience of the employer. Board and lodging furnished seamen in the convenience of the employer, and the value thereof need not be reported in the returns of such employees. Uniforms, rations and medical or hospital services afforded enlisted men or seamen need not be reported as income. These are furnished by the Government for its own purposes, and are not compensation for service.

JOHN J. GRAY

"The best investment I ever made in my life was when I bought Tanlac. I have not only recovered my health but I have also gained twenty-five pounds in weight and feel just brimful of new life and energy," said John J. Gray, 1330 Hollywood St., Philadelphia, Pa., a popular salesman at George's Clothing Store.

"When I began taking Tanlac I had been in failing health for some time as a result of stomach trouble and indigestion. I missed many meals rather than to suffer the discomfort I knew was to follow if I ate anything at all. I suffered especially from shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. Frequent dizzy spells and headaches added to my discomfort, and I awoke each morning feeling as if I had been run over by a steam roller."

"Since Tanlac toned up my stomach I am like a new man in every way, and eat, sleep, work and feel better than in years. Tanlac is sold in Alexandria by Edgar Warfield, Jr., and leading druggists everywhere."

Only three more days remain in which to file income tax returns. Time is up March 15. The internal revenue office reports a busy time this week, with the expectation of a big rush the early part of next week.

The Masons employed at the plant of the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station last night gave a banquet at the Young People's building which was largely attended. The banquet was served by the women of Martha Washington Chapter No. 42, Eastern Star. During the evening several of those present made speeches.

The Willard W. C. T. U. will hold its meeting Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. William Campbell, 216 South Washington street.

A full attendance is urged. The funeral of Mrs. Alice Virginia Edwards took place this morning from her late residence, 421 South Payne street. Services were conducted by Rev. Dr. E. B. Jackson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and burial was in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

This week has been most interesting in an athletic, musical, and literary way.

Tuesday morning the school went to the auditorium to talk over the championship game to be played Wednesday night. Tuesday afternoon the Glee Club held a meeting. Tuesday night the A. H. S. girls' basketball team played against Manassas for second district championship and won by a large score.

Wednesday night the boys met the Charlottesville team. This was one of the most exciting games of the season. The A. H. S. boys were defeated, but the game brought out that wonderful school spirit which pervades our whole high school.

The third and fourth year English classes have been having debates all week on the proposition, "The Railroads of the Country Should Be Owned and Controlled by the Government."

At assembly on Thursday morning Rev. John Lee Allison introduced Rev. Walter Buchanan, a returned missionary from Japan. Rev. Buchanan talked about the customs of the Japanese.

Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Literary Society held its regular meeting. The members of this week's winning teams debated on the given proposition. Miss Vinita Smith and Mr. Clarke Slaymaker were chosen to represent us in the State contests. Miss Mary D. Price and Mr. Wagner kindly acted as judges.

Rehearsals for the senior play, "The Spark of Life," are progressing well. This sparkling little comedy will be presented early in April.

FROM FRANCE

We learn from a gentleman who came passenger in the Meteor that the new conscription is pushed with such rigor that France is drained of its male population. Peace was not expected so secret is everything kept that the emancipation of Holland was not even known. It was generally understood, however, and admitted that Wellington had beat Soult in the great battle fought near Bayonne. The Emperor Alexander, has refused to permit the French minister, Caulincourt the murderer of the Duke D'Enghien, to appear at the Congress at Frankfurt.

U. S. REFUSAL OF GENOA MEET IS FIRST STEP

Tactful Pressure on Europe To Get Down To Business

REPARATIONS VITAL

United States Willing to Aid When Its Help Will Be Effective to Remedy Conditions.

Washington, March 10.—Refusal of the United States to participate in the Genoa conference may be viewed as the first step in a campaign of "tactful pressure" to promote economic rehabilitation of Europe, it was said yesterday by a high official of the American Government. It should not be regarded, this official said, as an indication of the United States' desire to hold aloof from the grave problems confronting European nations.

Secretary Hughes' note to Italy conveying the declaration of the United States of the invitation to participate in the Genoa meeting should be interpreted, it was said, rather as an expression of America's willingness to aid whenever it was felt that its aid could be rendered effectively.

The United States can not afford to enter into a situation where the help expected from it can not be given, officials explained, adding that the American Government must be guided as holding its support in abeyance until such time as the European nations "get down to brass tacks" in the matter of setting their houses in order.

Economic problems regarded by this country as of supreme importance in the consideration of methods of world rehabilitation include principally the rearrangement of German reparations and balancing of budgets by certain foreign nations.

Without consideration of these questions, in the view of the United States, it was said there could be no practical attempt at world-wide economic readjustment.

While it was thought improbable that there would be a change in the agenda of the Genoa Conference before its meeting on April 10, which would permit the United States to be represented, officials said the American Ambassador at Rome might attend the conference to report its proceedings to this Government.

TO TAKE HIKE

The Boy Scouts, Troop No. 1 of the Methodist Protestant Church at their weekly meeting last night decided to go for a hike Sunday, March 12 at 1:30 p. m. All visiting scouts are invited to make this hike. Scout master Paul O. Weirback will be in charge.

The Rev. Robert Browne pastor of the Church inspected the troop and drilled them for some time. Two new members were added by transfer from other troops. Three were advanced to tenderfoots; Burton Maupin, Vernon Kidwell, Fred Chesky.

All boys not identified with any other troop in the city, an invitation is extended to you to join this troop. Troop No. 2 Girl Scouts of this Sunday School will meet Friday afternoon, March 17, at 3:15 instead of Tuesday night.

Class No. 14 of the Methodist Protestant Sunday school will hold a prize social at 208 North Royal street Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

CHEER UP IT HAS BEEN WORSE!

Nearly six hundred banks in the United States suspended payment, and there were 16,000 commercial bankruptcies. Greece was in "the abyss of insolvency," and Italy was on the brink. In Russia, famine and pestilence prevailed, and in Australia nearly every bank of consequence had closed its doors. American farmers were so hard pressed that they could hardly find wherewith to buy smoking tobacco.

Such were the conditions in 1893, as revealed in newspapers and magazines of that time. Looking back on them, the period from which the world is now emerging seems not so gloomy after all.

Christian Education Campaign

The one million dollar campaign for Christian Education in the synod of Virginia will be presented in the Second Presbyterian Church tomorrow by representatives of the committee. Rev. O. W. Buschgen of Richmond, Va., will preach in the morning and Rev. Finch A. Clarke of Knoxville, Tenn., at night.

The institutions interested are Union Theological Seminary, Hampden-Sydney College, Assembly Training School, and The Orphans' Home at Lynchburg, Va.

ENGLAND EXPORT SHIPS

Exporting ships played a large part in the activities of England's shipyards last year, according to The Nation's Business. Thirty-eight per cent of the tonnage constructed was for foreign owners. The total construction in British yards in 1921 was 1,538,000 tons. The tonnage launched in American yards was about 1,000,000 and in Germany, 600,000. The figure compares favorably with her pre-war construction and included 40 vessels between 4,000 and 7,000 tons, 13 between 7,000 and 10,000, and one around 14,000 tons.

INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE IS ABOUT THROUGH

manhood his falsehoods have been intensified as he has grown older. He knows it to be false as he himself is, and I simply refuse to listen to the statement of this committee, and of the good people of Alexandria, not that I am afraid that anything he tells will besmirch my character, but I want them to know what the truth is; and I ask that the committee, and any other papers that may be represented here will publish the truth of what did occur.

Judge Norton stated that there were a great many incorrect statements published in the newspapers, for instance, about him. "It has not been making correct statements about the proceedings here," said he. "It seems to be trying to prejudice the committee, to force us to do something in the way of whitewashing. I have long been tired of doing this, except shortly after the publication of the first of these articles. Since that time I have had nothing to say to the paper. It puts me in the attitude of doing things and of looking things, and I have simply sat here listening to the evidence, and I think that what Judge Barley says is perfectly correct. The people ought to understand that these statements are being made, and that they are not true, making it appear as if Judge Barley was trying to do something and I was trying to block something, and so forth. Fortunately there have been many people present who have been able to see what occurred in the committee."

Just after the afternoon session convened, Judge Barley made the following statement to the committee:

"I thought I had made myself plain this morning, so that there could be no misunderstanding, that I did not make the remark that the Times credited me with in their yesterday's paper. I thought I had made it plain, and I felt that if there was any possibility of the reporter having any thought of honesty of purpose, of decency and of truth, he would at least not reiterate his statements in today's paper. I simply want to read the following from today's Times:

"Following the attempt made Friday to administer the first whitewash to Little Ben's judge the hearing will be closed today by another motion that the judge is guilty and that he be given a clean bill of health."

"Would Apply Whitewash."
"An attempt to do this Wednesday was blocked by Judge J. M. Norton, a member of the committee, who objected to a motion made by Judge L. C. Barley that Moncre's whitewash be applied at once and the farcial proceedings stopped."

Continuing his cross-examination, J. Randall Caton, speaking of Judge Moncre's advice to Stuart to solicit bills from merchants to collect, he asked whether the judge conceived that it is proper legal ethics for a lawyer to solicit business.

"If do," said the judge. "A young lawyer should properly solicit such business. Ethics is a wide question; as wide as the Pacific Ocean and about as deep. It is a matter of opinion, and I do not think it is amiss for a young lawyer to try to make his living."

"If there were a wreck on the electric railroad," said Mr. Caton, "and a number of people were injured, do you think it would be proper for you, as an attorney, to solicit business in connection with damage suits?"

"I do not," was the reply. "There is a difference between a leader in the profession and a young lawyer who is trying to get a footing."

Mr. Caton asked whether it is not the duty of an attorney not to stir up litigation, and whether soliciting bills to collect was not, in effect, stirring up litigation.

"Stirring up litigation is different from collecting bills," replied Judge Moncre. "I do not see why it is improper to get what is one's own. There is an art in collecting bills."

With reference to politics, Mr. Caton said: "You said you conceived it to be your inalienable right to express your conviction. Do you think that it is proper for a judge, in addition to expressing his conviction, to actively engage for one candidate or another?"

"That cannot be answered yes or no," said Judge Moncre. "It has to be explained. Where a judge takes the public interest requires it, it is his duty to use his influence as a man. I do not think it is right for him to prostitute the powers of his office in political affairs. However, all judges do take an interest in politics."

"Do you consider it proper for a judge to take an interest in the Supreme Court of the United States, Chief Justice Taft, for instance, to solicit votes?" asked Mr. Caton.

"That would depend upon the circumstances," said the judge. "If the candidates were nearly equal in experience, decency, judicial poise and other attributes, it would be his duty to register his conviction. If he thinks the community would materially suffer by the election of one or the other of the candidates, it would be his duty as Chief Justice Taft, for instance, to say that 'I understood you to say that Mr. Smith was the better man for the position of Commonwealth's attorney, and you so expressed it.'"

Judge Moncre: "I think that when it comes to moral stamina and manhood, Mr. Smith and Mr. Snow were in the same general class, but Mr. Smith has had far more experience than Mr. Snow along criminal lines, that being the greater part of the practice of the Commonwealth's attorney. Mr. Snow had practiced only a very short time, not long enough to qualify for the position of civil and police justice. There was a great hurrah going on about Mr. Smith, for objecting to the fire department running the apparatus up and down the street at excessive speed. For this reason I thought it proper to defend Mr. Smith."

Mr. Caton: "You have stated that because of your conviction, which you said was your right as an American citizen, and which you did not sacrifice as a judge, you supported Smith. You subsequently said it was your conviction to support Mr. Nicol as civil and police justice, but you had a conference with your friends, and as a result of that conference you supported Mr. Duvall."

Judge Moncre: "I said my personal choice and preference was Mr. Nicol, as I had known him a long time and he was a good man. In the discussion I left the matter to my friends, because I could make the same comment about Mr. Duvall. If Mr. Nicol and Mr. Duvall had been the only candidates I would have had very little to say."

Mr. Caton: "Did you not submerge your personal preference to the will of the committee in this case?"

Judge Moncre: "I did."

Mr. Caton: "Do you think it proper for a judge to participate in such a meeting?"

Judge Moncre: "I have known other judges to do so."

Mr. Caton: "In the case of Baggett vs. Baggett, a case of substituted service. The service was made on the defendant at Silver Spring, Md., and was sworn to by a sister of the complainant, who was also a witness in the case. If that had been particularly called to your attention, would you have considered that sufficient service?"

Judge Moncre: "I probably would. That is a matter of opinion between lawyers."

In reply to a question from Judge C. E. Nicol as to who owned the house in which Mrs. Mary L. Baggett resides, Judge Moncre stated he was under the impression that it is owned by Mrs. Reid, although he was not positive; that he had no interest in the property, either directly or indirectly.

Mr. Gardner L. Boothe asked whether any suggestion had ever been made to Judge Moncre, or to any other attorney, so far as he knew, that in bringing a client to the office of the attorney, there should be some division of fees. The judge replied that no such suggestion had ever been made to him, or to any other attorney, so far he knew.

Attorney Frank Stuart then made a further statement, which was mainly a reiteration of his direct testimony, regarding cases in which he had been attorney. He also stated that Attorney Charles Henry Smith, member of the House of Delegates, who is now in Richmond, had been "getting things by the court, and getting things done in a peculiar manner." On being questioned by Mr. Barber, he said that he referred particularly to certain cases in which Mr. Smith appeared as counsel for bootleggers.

Mr. Caton: "Do you think it proper for a judge to participate in such a meeting?"

Judge Moncre: "I have known other judges to do so."

Mr. Caton: "In the case of Baggett vs. Baggett, a case of substituted service. vice or to disregard it, as the case may be. This is especially true of bonus legislation, which at the moment is the most harassing question with which the party in power has to deal. He has regarded his pro-bonus pledge as binding upon him and upon his party, and has laid down a formula for dealing with the question.

Totally disregarding this, the President's party associates in the House have ventured upon a policy radically at variance with that to which he committed himself. He is willing to approve a postponement of soldier compensation legislation, if Congress will agree; but if not, then he will approve the levy of a very large means of raising the money. He has stated firmly that he will approve nothing else.

The House, however, has gone ahead with a make-shift bill which fails in all respects to meet his views, the authors apparently proceeding upon the assumption that he will recede when the time comes and take whatever may be handed to him. He does not regard this as flattering to his position or his leadership, and every official accompanying him knows that in his heart he is resentful.

Woman Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Makes This Offer

Cumberland, Md.—"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was between thirteen and fourteen years old and was going to school, because I suffered with pains and could not rest. I did not have any more trouble after that until I was married, then I always was troubled in my back while carrying a child and could not do my work until I took the Vegetable Compound. I am strong, do all my washing and ironing and work for seven children and feel fine. I always have an easy time at childbirth and what it did for me it will do

THE ADMINISTRATION OF MEDICINE

Except in rare emergencies no medicine should be given to a sick person without the doctor's order. The prescribed dose should be accurately measured in a medicine glass having a scale to show the number of teaspoonsful. When measuring medicine, think only of what you are doing; neither talk nor listen to conversation. First read the label on the bottle. Next, shake the bottle if the medicine is liquid in order to mix the contents thoroughly, then remove the cork with the second and third fingers and hold it between them while pouring, thus keeping the cork clean and protecting the contents of the bottle. Hold the medicine glass on a level with the eyes and in the other hand hold the bottle, with the side bearing the label uppermost to avoid spilling it; pour out the dose, measuring exactly, wipe the bottle, replace the cork and again read the label on the bottle. Most medicine should be diluted with a little water. Pills and capsules should not be presented to the patient in the attendant's fingers but on a saucer or teaspoon. Acids and medicines containing iron should be taken through a glass tube kept for medicine exclusively. Tubes and glasses should be washed at once after use, and neither they nor the bottles should stay in the patient's room. If a dose is omitted for any reason, do not increase the next dose; give the regular dose at the next regular time.

Serious mistakes in giving or taking drugs are far too common and no precautions are too great to guard against them. Never use medicine from a box or bottle that has no label. Never take or give another person medicine selected in the dark, even though you have positive knowledge that there is no other bottle or box of medicine in the whole house, in just such circumstances the fatal mistakes occur.

A few things can be done to make medicines more palatable. The water used to dilute the dose and to be taken after it should be very cold. Holding the nose is helpful. A piece of cracker, a peppermint, or a slice of lemon or orange, if allowed, may be taken afterward. Giving disagreeable medicines in ordinary food as lemon juice, orange juice or milk, and giving bitter powders in jam or jelly is unwise because it sometimes results in life long dislike of useful articles of diet. Where food is given directly after the dose to take away the taste the association of dislike seems to be formed less frequently.

The taste of castor oil is so disgusting that it often causes vomiting but if skillfully given the oil need not be tasted by a patient who is willing to cooperate. Wet the inside of a medicine glass or large spoon with very cold water and leave a little water in the bottom. Pour the required dose in slowly and cover it with more cold water. Let the patient hold in his hand something to take away the taste, then direct him to hold his nose and not to swallow until all the oil has been taken and then to chew the cracker or whatever he has to take away the taste and not to stop holding his nose until after he has swallowed that. Then pour the dose in quickly as far back as possible, taking care not to spill the last drop on the lips. Another way of giving castor oil is to add the prescribed dose to a teaspoonful of baking soda, then adding the juice of half a lemon, mixing thoroughly and letting the patient drink it while it is still effervescent. Castor oil may be bought in capsules, but on account of their size they are difficult to swallow.

STARVING KIDDIES

Richmond, Va.—As though the thousands of poor kiddies of the Near East had not suffered enough horrors through starvation, cold, terror and wanton brutality, Uncle Sam is preparing to launch upon them his pet abomination: next week in the shape of two entire barrels of castor oil. One tablespoon full is enough to throw the ordinary child in a terror, but two barrels—is almost inconceivable.

State Chairman Oliver J. Sands, of Richmond, has announced that as part of a large shipment of medicine being sent from Norfolk to the Near East Relief officials in Armenia and Syria, the two barrels of this most useful medicine will leave for overseas within the next week or ten days. Every conceivable kind of antidote, etc., is included in the medicine ordered.

"It is to furnish these children with simple remedies as this and thus save thousands of lives through careful doctoring, that the Near East Relief is seeking $300,000 in Virginia," Oliver J. Sands said last night. "Every mother will realize the importance of these medicines in keeping children well and happy. It costs comparatively little to buy these drugs, yet they can do inestimable good."

Beef doesn't "just grow." It has reached its present standing as a central article in the diet because the men behind the industry put much thought and work and money into the business.

Years ago, before our country was settled as thickly as it is today, beef cattle were raised near large cities. Today, according to Government figures, 80 per cent of the beef cattle in the United States are raised west of the Mississippi River. Seventy per cent of the beef is eaten east of that river.

New York and New England would have about six beefless days a week were it not that Iowa and her sister States a thousand or more miles away specialize in the raising and fattening of live stock. The middle western and western farmer thus does his share in feeding the east.

But the middle western farmer would be of no benefit to the meat eater of the city were it not for the fact that between the farmer and the retailer has grown up a long-range industry that takes the western steers and turns them into attractive, clean and inspected meat, and then transports this meat to the city markets.

Only a very small amount of beef is frozen. Most of it reaches the consumer as fresh meat, which has been merely chilled so that it will keep fresh and sweet while it is on its journey from the packing house to the consumer.

Not so many years ago a great majority of live animals were shipped a thousand miles in order to feed the eastern States. They shrunk in weight, many were bruised, many died. It was a wasteful system.

Today packing houses located near the producing sections buy the live animals, convert them into meat, saving all by-products, and then by means of their highly effective distributive organizations, market the meat products where they are desired.

Swift & Company has prepared two maps, one showing where the beef cattle are raised, the other where the beef is consumed. The maps furnish a graphic illustration of the difficulties which would confront both the consumer and the producer if they were forced to depend entirely upon the smaller local packer for their meat supply.

The larger packers have established hundreds of branch houses and many car routes which radiate from supply centers. Most of us know that branch houses are really sub-supply stations which carry packing house products. The car routes are really traveling branch houses; they supply smaller towns and villages where there are no branch houses, and the methods insure a constant supply of fresh meat. A salesman visits each town along a certain line of railroad at least once a week. The orders are sent in promptly. When he has covered his route the orders are loaded into a refrigerator car and the traveling ice-box stops at the towns where orders have been taken; the retailers are thus enabled to get such supplies as they need, in the best of condition.

It is a complicated process, but one on which the country has come to depend and take as a matter of course.

Elaine Hammerstein
in
"Handcuffs or Kisses"

WHEN Elaine Hammerstein appears at this theatre Monday in her newest Selznick Picture, "Handcuffs or Kisses," she will be supported by a cast of players who are well known to local patrons of the screen.

Robert Ellis, leading man in Selznick Pictures and recently a director of several screen successes, has the leading supporting role opposite Miss Hammerstein. Mr. Ellis is remembered as Olive Thomas' leading man in her early Selznick successes, "Upstairs and Down," and "The Spite Bride." He also has appeared prominently in other pictures made by this producer, and among his directorial successes was "The Imp," with Elsie Janis. Other players in the cast who have important roles are Florence Billings, Julia Swayne Gordon, Dorothy Chappell, Ronald Schabel, George Lessey, Edwards Davis and Ronald Coleman.

"Handcuffs or Kisses" was written by Thomas Edgelow and has for its background a large reformatory for girls. The scenario is by Lewis Allen Browne, and George Archainbaud, who directed other Elaine Hammerstein successes, directed the picture.

THE OTHER HALF

Richmond, March 6.—The fruit of months of bitter toll at the pitiful wage of ten cents a day, and representing more than 9,146 hours of hard labor, the convicts at the State penitentiary, led by Sidsa Allen, today forwarded to the Near East Relief in Richmond through Superintendent J. B. Wood, of the Penitentiary, a check for $91.46 as a contribution towards the relief of the thousands of children in Armenia and Syria slowly starving because of the lack of a few dollars.

Murderers, bandits, robbers, confidence men, forgers one and all they dug down into their pockets when Sidsa Allen, the last of the Allen boys, whose depredations, trial and punishment after the last appeal had failed, drew nationwide attention, told them of conditions in the stricken lands of the Near East. Anything, from a day's pay to the fruit of their toil for a month, was cheerfully given when men who looked death in the face with a smile for a few dollars without the flickering of an eyelash, or who defied all the powers of the law for a whim, felt the appeal of little hands outstretched pleading for a crust of bread and another chance to live.

No one but inmates of the penitentiary were allowed to give a cent to the fund and contributions offered by prison guards and others were turned over to the Near East Relief in a separate check. All gifts were entirely voluntary and the idea of raising the fund sprung from Allen's mind without suggestion from outside.

"If every Virginian could but give a day's pay to the poor children of Armenia whose only fault has been that they are the children of martyred Christians," State Chairman Oliver J. Sands said today in commenting upon the contributions. "The fund of $300,000 which must be raised in Virginia this year as this State's quota in the national drive would be raised quickly and something could be done to save the lives of others who have never been reached, but who are dying without food or clothing, driven from their homes into the cold like beasts. The imagination cannot depict conditions which would sweep away a race and leave only its children, destitute, harassed and oppressed by a nation whose only hope is that these children will die and be no more bother."

Amundsen Prepares to Continue Arctic Voyage

side of the vessel's northward route. The accompanying layout shows Captain Amundsen with an Eskimo child he adopted, the ship Maud and some of the members of the crew.

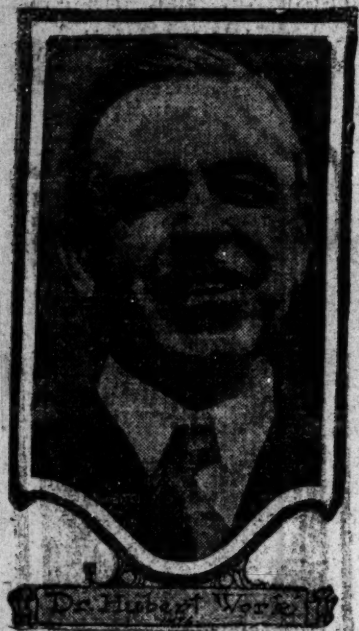

Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, wants to sit "on top of the world." He wants to have a "week-end" dinner at the peak of the North Pole as he attempts to go over the top of the world in his next Arctic voyage, which will rival that of Columbus. In the Lake-Union shipyards, at Seattle, Amundsen's Eskimo crew is repairing and refitting the "good ship Maud," in which the Iceland journey will be made. The explorer plans to start for Seattle early in June. The Maud will carry two airplanes for the purpose of making extensive geographic and hydrographic surveys for a thousand miles on either side of the vessel's northward route.

Dog Actors Pay Taxes on Incomes

From Dogville, in the land of Yelp, came these canine actors to the Collector of Internal Revenue in New York to pay taxes on their incomes. Each week payday comes around for these dog actors, who are members of the troupe of Miss Olga Lipinski. In a Greenwich Village bank each of the canine stars has a bank account, says Miss Lipinski, who is their trainer. Here they are shown shelling out shekels to help pay America's war debt.

The WISHING FAIRY

by Corinne

Adventures of Peter and the Princess at Bottom of the Well.

WHEN Scary Peter and little Princess Susanne fell to the bottom of the deep well, Stella, the Wishing Fairy, said to her Brownies, who were listening breathlessly to her "make believe" story, "they suddenly found themselves facing a long, long road. There were no flowers or trees or birds or any of the things that they had before been accustomed to, and they felt just a wee bit frightened; so they held tight on each other's hands and walked and walked, for they were in a hurry to reach the end of this awful road that stretched so endlessly before them."

"At last they saw in the distance a bleak pile of gray stones that as they approached it gradually showed itself to be an immense castle. Somehow or other they didn't feel that they liked this castle, yet they were tired and hungry and there seemed nothing else to do but to knock at the gate and ask to be allowed to come in. And this they did. The moment the gate opened and the moment they walked into the courtyard they realized that they had magically changed into two Golden Pheasants."

"An enormous Giant walked toward them, and they were too frightened to even move. So he caught them in his large, red hands and whisked them into a cage."

"It was a big cage and the two unfortunate Pheasants walked back and forth and back and forth, for they had no idea what awful thing would next happen to them. After a while the Giant came and gave them food and water, but at the same time he prodded them cruelly with a stick and then he left."

"Our two poor Pheasants were just about as unhappy as it is possible for Pheasants to be, when suddenly a tiny little fellow appeared before them."

"Cheer up!" he gaily cried, "for I have come to tell you what to do to get away. To-morrow when the Giant comes to feed you be sure to scratch his head with your claws. [He said this to the Pheasant that had been Scary Peter.] A drop of the Giant's blood will drop on your paw. Rub both your beak and that of this other Pheasant with this drop of blood and instantly the frightful Giant shall die, you shall be once more your old selves, the cage will open and you shall be free."

"You can be sure," said the Fairy, "the Pheasants remembered this. Next day when the Giant came to feed them they did exactly as they had been told. The Pheasant that had been Scary Peter scratched the Giant as hard as he could, he then rubbed the beak of the Pheasant that had been the Princess Susanne with the drop of the Giant's blood, and then there the Giant died and lay stretched out beside their cage, they were once more their old selves, the funny little Scary Peter and the Princess Susanne!"

"Then what?" whispered Pimble.

"Then they took possession of the Giant's castle and lived there happily ever after, and trees and flowers immediately began to grow and birds came there and everything was very beautiful and lovely."

"And who was the little fellow who told the Pheasants what to do?" asked Pimble.

"Oh, a Brownie or some such nice little person," answered the Fairy.

"Well," sighed Snookums happily, "I like 'make believe' stories ever so much!"

President Harding to Take Fishing Trip

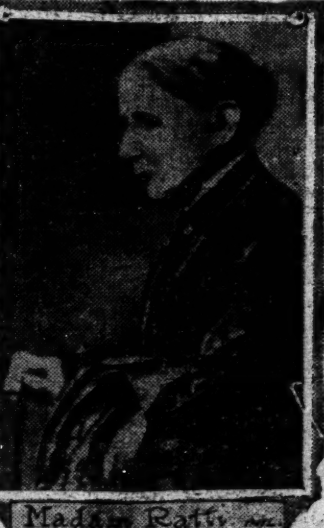

With the achievements of his first year as the nation's Chief Executive now recorded in history, President Warren G. Harding, admitting that the "first year is the hardest," expects soon to be on a fishing trip to Miami, Fla. Stern duties of the White House Chief will be forgotten for a brief span of days, and Ohio's noted son will "dig bait" and, corduroy-garbed, his himself to a spot where fishin' is good. He'll probably do deep-sea angling.

Accuses Chinaman of Taylor Murder

Harry N. Fields, held by police in Detroit, declares that William D. Taylor, noted film director, was murdered by a Chinese member of a party of four drug addicts with whom Fields drove to the Taylor bungalow at Los Angeles. Following his "confession," Los Angeles detectives immediately instituted a search for a revolver. Fields said was hidden by Taylor's assassin. The Chinaman accused of murder has not been found.

Norfolk—Three persons perished in a fire that partially destroyed two boarding houses here yesterday. The dead are: Helen White, of South Norfolk; Charles Upton, of Portsmouth; B. M. Hyatt, of the U. S. Collier Orion.

Charlottesville—Miss Helen Hopkins, of this county, who had a narrow escape from death in the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster, has sufficiently recovered from her illness to leave the hospital, and is steadily improving, though still confined to her room.

Williamsburg—Henry Boykin, an aged negro, was burned to death when his home at Norge was destroyed by fire last night between 9 and 10 o'clock. Boykin was probably asleep in his room when the fire started and was overcome by the smoke. His charred remains were dragged out of the embers after the fire subsided. Boykin was an ex-slave and one of the few old time negroes in that section.

Hopewell—The curfew law virtually became an ordinance of Hopewell by the action of the Board of Aldermen at a special meeting Monday afternoon.

The ordinance, which was drafted by City Attorney F. P. Berkeley and Chief of Police W. E. Thurston, had already been passed by the Common Council and now requires the approval of Mayor D. L. Elder, who has expressed himself as strongly in favor of such an ordinance.

That law requires that all children under the age of 14 years shall be off the streets of Hopewell by 9 o'clock in the evening from September 1 to March 31, and by 10 o'clock in the evening from April 1 to August 31, unless accompanied by a guardian.

THE MERRY JOURNEYS OF MARY JANE

Mary Jane's Adventure with Grizzly George

ONE day Mary Jane went away out in the woods near her house. She was having a lovely time, picking wild strawberries in a clearing among the trees.

All of a sudden she heard someone in a deep, gruff voice say, "Woof! woof!" Mary Jane was awfully scared at first, but when she looked around, she saw it was only Grizzly George, the Bear. George's full name was Pablo Vicidomini—but everybody called him George, for short.

George said, "Mary Jane, don't you know you shouldn't come away out in the woods and eat up all my personal, private strawberries? I was saving these berries for Mrs. George and our two children, Rutherford and Gwendolyn. Your mother can get you lots of strawberries at the grocer's."

Mary Jane told George she was sorry and would never do it again. Then

Mary Jane and Grizzly George got to talking about good things to eat, and Mary Jane told George about how they had Mary Jane Syrup on their pancakes, and spread on bread and everything, up at her house every day. And how you could make the finest fudge you ever tasted in your life out of Mary Jane Syrup.

And then Mary Jane promised George that she would come to visit him and the missus and the children, and she would bring a great big can of Mary Jane Syrup along, so that they could all have a real treat together.

And then Mary Jane shook hands with George and ran all the way home, so as to be there in time for the golden brown biscuits spread with Mary Jane Syrup that her mother had prepared for supper.
